odenal mucosal biopsy in patients with CD, allowing, in some cases, the diagnosis of other enteropathies or the confirmation of a diagnosis already made by histology or serology. It is noteworthy that microscopic examination of duodenal mucosal biopsy specimens showed CD-related changes in 75% of CD patients with normal duodenal endoscopic appearance. The method offers great sensitivity and specificity in detecting CD-associated changes and is well accepted by the patients. Duodenal PSC was diagnosed in 4 of 6 patients with CD and gastric PSC in 5 of 8 patients with CD \[[@CR15]\]. Thus, we could diagnose 5 patients with CD and PSC together with TNFα antagonists. There was a higher proportion of CD patients with UC or TNFα antagonist therapy in the duodenal ulcer group, while such patients were rare in the gastric ulcer group. However, the prevalence of previous CD was comparable between groups. PSC presents with chronic or recurrent abdominal pain, weight loss, and iron deficiency anemia. These symptoms are also common to CD, so the diagnosis of PSC depends on the exclusion of CD and other enteropathies \[[@CR16]\]. Therefore, to diagnose PSC, a diagnosis of CD must be ruled out. Importantly, PSC should be differentiated from other causes of chronic gastric outlet obstruction. Given its high association with CD, the possibility of PSC should be considered in patients with an elevated CRP level and chronic symptoms suggesting PSC. There are several limitations to our study. First, the retrospective study design is associated with a lack of certain baseline data and a limited sample size, especially for the analysis of duodenal PSC. Second, a temporal relationship between duodenal CD and PSC could not be established, since a long-term follow-up was not available. Third, we could not determine the effects of TNFα antagonists on the duodenal mucosa. Conclusions [#Sec5] ========== In conclusion, we found that duodenal CD is relatively common in patients with CD and PSC. Duodenal PSC might develop at the same time of CD and could be the cause of PSC. Moreover, duodenal CD is often asymptomatic, and as such may be overlooked when evaluating PSC. The administration of TNFα antagonist might be associated

It's been a long time since I posted about cover art on here, but I'm feeling the t-shirt need back with a vengeance, so here is my take on the cover of Tim Minchin's latest album! The artwork was drawn in both mono and colour by our very own Lizzie - see her post about it here.The colours in this image are then updated (quite literally) to modern video game colours to give us the current print edition.I hope you enjoy it, and what it means to me!Well most of the error was on the far end. Reason I said most of the error was on the far end was because that was where the elevation was really bad and you guys hit it real hard. The first takeoff on that side was when you guys got rid of the long board and began to lift off on the nose a little bit. Then when you guys came back around for the horizontal approach, we had a bunch of people on the ground and we had lifted off a little bit on the nose and a bunch of people were trying to abort that and all the wind was behind us so the only thing we could do was separate ourselves from the mountain because we were pushing up on the nose. We went up to the gear, picked up the boards and came off the mountain, and we turned 90 degrees and started to circle it. At that point we were the only ones up there.Web-based software-as-a-service (SaaS) solutions have become prevalent in the enterprise. Some such solutions can be hosted on premise while others can be delivered over the internet to end users via a network environment, such as the Internet or a private intranet. To date, however, the types of network environments with which SaaS solutions have been offered to users have been limited. To remain competitive, SaaS vendors need to facilitate a wide-variety of different network environments. Thus, there exists a need for a network environment interface (NEI) that provides a common protocol between software applications and enables connectivity with a wide variety of network environments. An Enterprise Application Integration (EAI) solution, such as SAP NetWeaver® or the like, can provide access to a wide variety of services, including data access and database services such as a database accessed via a database management system (DBMS). To date, the access to SaaS services has been limited to a narrow set of SaaS environments. Thus, there is a need for a NEI
