Airtable (2022)

In a few words, Airtable is a web-based workspace application that helps you organize, collaborate and share information. Airtable User Interface & Features Airtable works with the data that you already have available in your system and doesn't require additional installation on your computer. It's free to try, so there's no risk in giving it a try. Database App Airtable is a database app. You can access your data in Airtable from any of your devices. If you want to share work to others on a timeline, Airtable is a perfect option. Spreadsheet App Airtable can be used as a spreadsheet app. It uses a clean and intuitive interface that will help anyone understand it. So, you've decided to shift your workforce to the cloud and you have reason to believe that any day now, your choice could be vindicated. It seems like you've already started working with cloud-based solutions – you've signed up to a CRM software and you're using the collaboration features of your preferred messaging service. On the other hand, maybe you're still experimenting with various cloud-based services and none of them has tickled your fancy. Regardless of whether or not you've already started, there are some pros and cons of choosing this kind of workplace solution that need to be taken into consideration before settling on your final choice. Why Use Cloud-Based Solutions? One of the most obvious benefits of using a cloud-based solution is that it's available when and where you need it, without the need for you to spend time and resources on integrating it into your current processes. You also avoid installing software on each and every device in your office. This should free up precious time and will make your work more efficient. Consider the Possibility of Disconnecting One of the greatest challenges of the current organizational landscape is the fact that the internet is not a certainty. It's possible that at any given moment, you may be unable to connect to the internet, at least for any kind of period of time. To be frank, such an occasion is not all that uncommon. Think about the effect of an unexpected blackout – the phone line cuts and you're unable to connect to your email address. How much time do you think your inbox will hold up before you start hitting the refresh button? The mere fact that you're being trained to think in such terms should serve as a powerful motivator to consider cloud-based solutions
