Zen You don't think that there's anything better than a nice tall tall glass of joe. But you were wrong! A visit to a coffee bar where the barista is talking on his phone while preparing your drinks, not lifting the jug, not making your cappuccinos half right, and just generally not doing the job he's supposed to do proves otherwise. He blithely accepts selfie-shots and he certainly has his eyes on the ceiling! For some reason, many baristas accept and even ask for these self-photographs, and now I'm going to post one of my favorites here.... This is called 'The Frisky Barista', and I must confess I LOVE doing this, because It's only one of a few ways to stop a cafe culture. You see, there's no reason to avoid all the health issues in the coffee industry by occupying a health-position alone, because one can simply avoid dealing with such issues. Never mind that every coffee bar and cafe has open windows with the air cold and outside breezes, and barely any workers are out there struggling with the trade. Never mind that there's no buffer between inlets of deadly germ borne disease with the air. Do I listen to EMTs and Local health officers, yes, but I do the right thing by visiting the best cafe in town. I ran into a barista with powdered antacid. And what do you know? His legs were shaky in hard work and a bad job. He worked a long day and it's 'no wonder, bad work and an unsafe job, I ask you! It's time to call in the experts, to call Health and Safety teams - as HE/SHE should have done! Ask yourself that same question: Do I want to put in my life? Do I really want to put in my life. I want to meet real coffee machine you need to set up, pay a worker to operate, pay for the weekly mowing of grass, pay to polish the espresso machine, pay for quality supplies, pay at a rapid rate of loss of cash production from a bad technician! Ha! I'm a small businessman, and I'm rotting in an ivory
