Create a Custom Preset Create a Custom Preset in Photoshop is a tool that allows you to customize one or more of Photoshop's more common tools and features to perform a specific set of tasks. You can then use that preset whenever you want to do the same thing. The "Create a Custom Preset" panel has two parts. On the left, there is a list of the tools and filters available to use. The right side of the panel has buttons that let you filter down to a specific tool. You can add one or more tools, remove a tool, or turn on or off a tool. In addition to the tools you see, there are a number of options that help control the tools. Some of them are shown below: * There is no need to use the Filter button to add a filter. Photoshop will remember the last filter applied, but each time you invoke the Filter>Filter menu, you need to add a filter. * To stop the "Draw with" tool from being turned on, simply click outside the box that says "Draw with" or the left side of the box will say "Click to toggle this tool on/off." * To turn on the "Draw with" tool, click "Draw with" within the box. Set the Range Set the Range defines what area of the image will be affected by an action. For example, when you set the Range to "All, 15% to 100%" of an image you will make sure that only that specific area of the image will be affected by the blur action. * Remember: when you use a slider, it changes the action's behavior automatically. You don't need to set the action to the Range you want. Photoshop will behave as if you did it. * To set the Range for an action, click the button on the left side of the Range box. Then, on the right side of the box, you need to enter the first and last percentages of the image you want to use as a range. You can move the numbers by clicking on them. To remove the amount you set as the Range, click outside the box. Choose an Action Choosing an Action in Photoshop is a way to save a series of commands in one action. This allows you to repeat the commands over and over again without having to type in the same actions over and over. You can create an Action
