"We're looking for cutting-edge technologies that could deliver immersive and engaging gameplay," Pini Zahavi, Global Brand Director, FIFA. "FIFA 20 introduced the tech to set a new high bar for player immersion in gaming, and we're on the lookout for the next generation of this technology." [More] Included in the new technology is "Free Kick Zones," which provide an immersive experience for players by expanding their field and allowing them to make different actions. They also allow for realistic directional control of the ball as well as the ability to dive for a free kick. These are placed in the middle of the field, just outside the penalty area, 20 yards from goal and just outside the box, creating a distance where players are able to control and move the ball effectively. Players can access these zones from any position on the field at any time during gameplay. As noted earlier, EA Sports introduces this new "player-motion-capture" technology to allow for an even more realistic and immersive experience in FIFA 22. Obviously, players like Real Madrid's Luka Modric, Barcelona's Neymar or Manchester United's Anthony Martial are living and breathing realism when they're on the pitch. So what is the technology that allows for that? Following on to a previous year's post we saw a series of screen shots of FIFA 20 players, both during a match and during their off the pitch activities, as they did their warm up, stretching, etc. Finally we saw the player in motion, of course running, jumping, dribbling and passing. On the main page of the FIFA website we saw the article "New Motion Capture Technology Used to Capture FIFA 20 Player Movement" with the above screen shots. Today we see EA Sports releasing new screen shots of the 22 player movement used in FIFA 22. Does this give us a taste of what we can expect from the game? Honestly, no it does not. But as I said, the two screen shots I'm about to show you are just a taste of what we can expect. We can see Luka Modric, Neymar and Anthony Martial easily make it a top player of 2018. And there are over 9,000 other players in the game as well. So keep in mind, this is just a taste of what you can expect from FIFA 22. All of the players are still in motion and the game engine is

Developer: EA Sports Publisher: Electronic Arts Release Date: September 7, 2016 Note: If you're seeing a screen on an Xbox One when you open and close the system then try unplugging the controller from your console. Most people report the issue after switching a hard disk to another console. Note 2: Some people on Xbox One say this was resolved via installing the Xbox One XDK service, though this was never a recommendation in the previous generation of Xbox One. I'm not sure why this is enabled by default on the Xbox One when installing now, but if you don't have this enabled then you're likely to see this issue on a fresh install. To fix this head to the Xbox One settings to turn off XDK and the system will be fine. Update: I've had a couple of people report that after applying one of the XMG updates mentioned below the problem has been resolved. One person said it was completely fixed, another person said their problem disappeared after applying the fix. UPDATE: This problem is being reported sporadically on Xbox One consoles for download code that's been updated to version 1.04. Make sure you have update applied and then just play a game and watch out for it. Note: If you've already updated your console to 1.0.3, try updating again and see if this fixes the problem.
