Photography is a very addictive hobby. And one of the latest trends in photography is the landscape photography. With this trend, there is a new camera series that was recently launched called the Lumix ZS40. As the name suggests, this is a new Lumix camera for landscape photography. I decided to check out this camera and to see if it is worth considering when shopping for a new camera. The Lumix ZS40 has built-in autofocus, and a new 16-megapixel sensor. The camera comes with a 3x zoom and a digital viewfinder. If you are looking for an affordable camera for landscape photography, then this Lumix may be worth considering. To see if the Lumix ZS40 is the right camera for you, continue reading this review. Camera The camera has a 16-megapixel sensor and a 3x optical zoom with a maximum aperture of f/3.5. The photos have a resolution of 12.1 megapixels. There is an optical viewfinder and a LCD screen. The camera has three customizable shooting modes: the creative mode, the landscape mode, and the sport mode. Image quality The Lumix ZS40 has the new 16-megapixel sensor. With this sensor, the photos will have very detailed and sharp images. There are no noticeable artifacts in the images. Auto-focus The camera has a single autofocus point that is used to focus on subjects. However, the camera is not capable of autofocus while shooting video. To get a clear shot, the camera has to be manually focused. When shooting photos, the Lumix ZS40 does not have an ability to use face detection or auto flash. However, there is an ability to use the flash in a manual mode. The flash can also be used for closeup shots of the subject. Continuous shooting The camera can shoot 10 photos at a time. When shooting videos, the camera can shoot 5 frames per second. Movie quality The camera offers 1080p video recording. Battery life The battery life of the camera is rated at 410 shots. Controls The camera has a newly designed grip that is comfortable and easy to hold. The camera has three customizable shooting modes: the creative mode, the landscape mode, and the sport mode. These three shooting modes are made for different kinds of photos. The creative mode has three buttons: on
