Note Selecting None to keep layers in the Current Layer dialog box disables the option to change layer visibility and enable undo. 5. Step 5. Save your new image in your working document by selecting File > Save, or use the image's right arrow . Highlight "Save for Web & Devices" in the "Save for Web & Devices" menu, and click Save (Figure 7.5). The resulting file will be saved as a Photoshop file with file extension.PSD.

Adobe Photoshop is the professional version of the Photoshop product family. The product comes with powerful features, is packed with functionality and design tools, and has a high learning curve. Photoshop is mainly used by photographers for editing, graphic design, and illustration. The user interface of Photoshop is very different from that of Adobe Photoshop Elements. Not only do you have to learn a new interface, you also have to learn an extensive list of new shortcuts and commands. While in Photoshop Elements, you can create, edit, save, and share without leaving the software, and can also open, view, and save files from the web, in Photoshop you have to launch Photoshop to open files (by double-clicking on the file) or access the Cloud from the web. If you are a beginner you may not have the confidence to use Photoshop Elements. Using Photoshop will be your new favorite feature. You will learn all the shortcuts and commands that make Photoshop work faster and more efficiently. If you are a professional, however, you will miss the simplified interface and the tools that come with Photoshop. You will quickly find that Photoshop is harder to work with than Photoshop Elements. We'll start this guide with a brief introduction to the Photoshop Elements user interface. We will then review the basic functions of the Photoshop Elements interface in a series of screenshots to help you create new images, edit existing images, and work with different features. Defining a Photo In Photoshop, a new image is called a document. When you open a new image, it is opened as a new document in Photoshop (like when you open a Word document in Microsoft Word). If you have opened the image from the file system, the image is opened in an image window (see Figure 1). If you opened the image from the web, the image opens in the web browser and a blank screen is displayed. You can work with Photoshop Elements in two ways: open a photo on the hard drive, or open an image from the web. If you open a photo on the hard drive, Photoshop Elements stores all the layers of the image as a Photoshop file. If you open a photo from the web, Photoshop Elements displays the images as image layers or mockups. These mockups or layers allow you to work on the image in Photoshop Elements but are not saved with the image. You can save the image later as a Photoshop document or see the mockups in the Photoshop Elements inspector.

The suppression of personhood in the Name of 'Reproductive Rights': The Struggle for Reproductive Justice in Namibia Abstract In this article, I provide an analysis of the struggle for reproductive rights in Namibia. In the early post-independence era, pregnancy was a taboo which may lead to social and economic deprivations for the woman. That changed after 1990 when the anti-abortion law was repealed and limited to ultrasound examinations. However, little attention has been paid to the gender dimensions that were actively used by anti-abortion activists. In doing so, the article contrasts the women's and men's struggle for reproductive rights, providing a better understanding of the dynamics that shape the gender relations within the movement. This research explores the ways in which the struggle over reproductive rights in Namibia takes place at the intersections of gender, power, and reproduction.

Q: Replace country code UCCs with parent CPNR I have a large text file containing URNs that represent UCCs. I'd like to change them to the parent CPNR. The file also contains country codes such as "USA" or "UK" that I'd like to change to the parent CPNR as well. Is this possible using a Windows batch file? Note: I'm doing this in batch because this is part of a Windows installer package that I build in my on-site build automation (this step of the build environment uses a locally-hosted Windows VM).

A: I found this solution and it works perfectly: @echo off for /f "tokens=*" %%G in (x.txt) do (set CPNR=%%G for /f "tokens=3 delims=: " %%i in (%%G) do set CPNR=%%i echo %%G ->!CPNR!) It reads the list of URNs from an input file, and replaces all them with the parent CPNR. For example, if the input file is named x.txt contains all the URNs, and the desired output is named y.txt contains only the parent CPNRs: x.txt -> y.txt: abc:123 xyz:456 It produces the following result: abc:123 -> 123 xyz:456 -> 4567890 One limitation

What's New in the?

If somebody asked you what would constitute proof that the Daily Telegraph was completely irrational and driven purely by fascism and nothing but pure evil, you would probably have to come up with something along the lines of “the interview with Nick Clegg,” “the front page on article 50 day”, or “the front page on the day of the Brexit referendum.” But what of the rest of the front pages, which are not easily assigned to any one worldview? We can therefore turn to the Telegraph to see what its policy on the Brexit vote means for the rest of the media's coverage. The Telegraph in typical fashion is both confusing and contradictory, as with its coverage of and commentary on the referendum. On the one hand, it claimed that the Leave vote would lead to “economic Armageddon”, while, on the other hand, it argued that Brexit would increase stability, create more jobs and make Britain richer. It claimed that a leave vote would see the pound fall against the dollar, be downgraded by ratings agencies, cause a spike in inflation and leave Britain vulnerable to Russian and Chinese financial boycotts. While all of these happen if we quit the EU, they also happened – and continue to happen – if we had stayed in. Like all Brexit supporters, it claimed that we would have more money to spend and that we would be “richer,” and like the Remainers, it claimed that we would no longer be able to shape the European policies that would cost us. On Brexit day, it wanted out but in a way that undermined the British people’s democratic vote. It claimed that a leave vote was caused by media bias against Leave, and therefore the vote was more a protest vote against the media than an actual assessment of whether Brexit was in Britain’s interests. It was, in short, the playground bully: “Oh look, we’ve won. We can do what we want now, and you can’t stop us.” Read more: The Telegraph is a political right-wing paper – without any pretence at being liberal Journalists and editors should not be afraid to stand up for what they believe in, no matter how hard the blowback will be from the right If we now consider the other major newspaper titles on Brexit, it would be fair to say that the coverage and commentary were, for the most part, self-interested with
