... .. I'm not going to talk about what happened, I can't, something just won't come out of my pen. I'm not going to talk about what came, what has passed. If there's a will, if you're willing, you can read it. Everything, that has already passed. All that has been, what hasn't been, what will be, What won't be. ... ..

MDS is a heterogeneous group of clonal hematopoietic stem cell disorders that encompass several distinct entities with overlapping features. The prognosis for patients with myelodysplasia is variable. High-risk disease includes patients with therapy-related MDS, patients with chromosomal abnormalities, and those with excess blasts. These groups have an unfavorable prognosis, and mortality in 2 years is in excess of 10%. MDS is also associated with significant morbidity, especially complications of cytopenias. Treatment options for patients with MDS include supportive care, low-dose cytarabine, hypomethylating agents, retinoids, and allogeneic stem cell transplantation. More aggressive risk-adapted therapy is recommended for patients with high-risk MDS, such as those with high-risk cytogenetics or blast count. Patients with isolated del(5q) may be considered for hematopoietic stem cell transplantation. This article reviews the biology of MDS, the classification of the disorder, and the management and outcomes of patients with MDS.Previous research has shown that negative self-evaluation is the best predictor for suicidal ideation in general, and that association remains significant even after controlling for depression. However, few studies have explored the social significance of being self-critical, and relatively few have examined whether self-critical cognitions predict suicide specifically. The aim of this study was to examine whether negative self-evaluation predicts suicidal ideation, independently of depression, and whether this effect is specific to suicidal ideation. Participants were 549 individuals aged between 14 and 35 years and completed a battery of measures including: the Self-Esteem Inventory, Beck Depression Inventory-II, and the Suicide Behavior Questionnaire.
