He said the "clash of personalities and culture" within the sport was driving fans away. "I see powerlifting as a brutal sport, but an effective sport," said Mr Olympia 2009 contest winner and two-time powerlifting world champion Paul Anderson. "It's rewarding to produce results through brute force, but powerlifting culture has grown so extreme I no longer feel that's what the sport is about," he said. "I've also seen powerlifters bullied and marginalized for showing their true selves." The 'Original Powerlifter' said he took the harsh critique as an opportunity to announce the creation of a new organisation to help clean up the sport: The Posable Powerlifting Association. "The idea for a new organization that has more support from fans and colleagues actually came from a conversation I had with powerlifting legend Vinny Vicario," wrote Anderson. "He encouraged me to take on a big challenge and start something new. I quickly realized we needed to call it the PPF and he is helping out with the branding. It's a way to support a clean sport and a way to call out those who stand in the way of change." Anderson had previously created The Celebrity Athletic Association, The Rising Professionals Group and The Generation NFLP – to help bring the sport

" —Aws, from the Quran In the 1960s, by the time I was a teenager, I started to notice how many people didn't like the things that were happening in America. It seemed to me that they didn't have anything positive to say about the world I was growing up in, and I, too, had a lot of negative things to say. So I tried to be the good person I thought the world expected from me. But my
