I want to check the time since the last successful connection (any connection method). How to do that? Basically I want to know how many seconds have passed since the last successful connection. A: You can use the WaitForSingleObject() function to wait for a time-out event. The Windows-API function provides a convenience method, but you can use the WaitForSingleObject() method in other ways too:

WaitForSingleObject(Handle, Milliseconds, [False]) WaitForSingleObject(Handle, Timeout, [false]) See: WaitForSingleObject - MSDN. Use it like this: const DWORD milli_seconds_to_wait = 1000; // waiting for the time-out event HANDLE hTimer = CreateTimerQueue(); WaitForSingleObject(hTimer, milli_seconds_to_wait); // check if the time-out occurred and handle it if (WaitForSingleObject(hTimer, 0) == WAIT_OBJECT_0) { // the time-out occurred, handle it }

Wikipedia calls Western Civilization a collection of "civilizations" that have developed over the millennia, in many areas and from diverse cultural and geographic influences. The first civilizations developed in Eurasia. As the Roman Empire and its successors spread across Europe, they adopted many of the customs, technologies, and religions of the people they conquered. History of Western civilization Western civilization is the collective name used to describe the modern world and its advancement. It can be considered the geographic western hemisphere, especially Europe, North America and the Australasian continent. Ancient civilisations that were heavily influenced by the West include: Modern warfare Warfare, from its origins in antiquity through the 20th century, has been considered by many a defining feature of Western civilization. History of warfare The term "warfare" is used to describe the organized armed conflict between individuals, or groups of individuals, typically for territorial conquest or for some other political, religious
