Music composed by Oskar Schuster. Release Date: October 16, 2017. Developer: 1 man studio and Tiburon sound design. Publisher: 1 man studio and Tiburon sound design. Genre: Horror, Psychological Thriller, Fantasy DRIVE. What a night! This is a horror game in the spirit of classic horror movies and game jams. Be scared by not knowing what is coming next. We created a horror game to play against the fears of many people. We think you'll find it interesting. The game takes place around midnight. You wake up in the isolated apartment of your friend and confidant Olja. You find out that she has been out for the whole night and all of the following is somehow weird. You spend the entire game trying to find an escape or a solution to unlock a series of doors and find out what is going on. You need to keep awake. And if you want to prevent insanity, don't listen to the sounds and vibrations that pass through the walls. DRIVE is designed to play a horror game, but it's also a game jam. IT HAS SNOW. Something is very wrong with the cold and damp air in Olja's apartment. The clock reads 14:22:34. Oskar Schuster has a very strong soundtrack in this game. We have recorded every sound in the game, using instruments, microwaves, phones, speakers. We took every possibility of generating sounds that we could not reproduce by being there. We had many discussions to create a new audio experience. We played a lot of games and movies and listened to a lot of soundtracks. The sound that passes through the walls is something that freaks out people. We have wanted to create something that can be used as an inspiration of this fear. Those sounds are created by mixing samples and synthesizers, with particular attention to the play of the humming of Oskar's Celesta. The player has the possibility to avoid listening to the sounds that pass through the walls of Olja's apartment. The sounds that come from the walls are created using two doors.

1. Game jam 2019 At the end of September Olja invited me to make a game about an impossible world. I am really delighted to be here and to create a game that has no rules and no boundaries. So I took the theme "Something is very wrong

Supreme Court of Mississippi. March 27, 1979. Pierce & Pierce, Albert M. Pierce, Tupelo, for appellant. Smith, Smith, Jackson & Taylor, James E. Smith, Jr., Tupelo, for appellee. Before ROBERTSON, LEE and COFER, JJ. COFER, Justice, for the Court: This is an appeal from the Circuit Court of Lee County wherein that court affirmed the judgment of the county court which found the appellant, Newspaper Publishing Company, guilty of contempt of court and fined the appellant $75.00 plus court costs. The appellant was prosecuted by the appellee for contempt of court by reason of the publishing of a letter of the appellee, Calvin H. Jones, a former county supervisor, to a prospective employer, Merlyn S. Walker, at a time when the appellee was still employed as a county supervisor. Walker was employed by Union Camp, Inc., which was negotiating a mill job to be awarded to Union Camp. Jones was employed by the Union Camp. Jones' letter was written to Walker in February, 1975. The letter was written in an attempt to convince Union Camp that Jones should be awarded the mill job and that Jones should receive a better salary for such job. The county court found the appellant to be in contempt of court and fined the appellant the sum of $75.00. From this action of the county court the appellant appealed to the Circuit Court of Lee County and the appellee did not appeal from the county court's judgment. The county court found that the appellant violated a decree of the county court rendered January 9, 1975. This decree restrained the appellant from publishing any libelous and slanderous matter relating to the appellee. The appellant does not contend that the decree did not restrain the publication of

What's new:

The Union Pacific GE C40-8 0-8-2 (2-6-0) 'Corinthian' was built in 1913 for the Southern Pacific Company. It is the sister locomotive to the GE C40-8 0-8-2 'Corinthian' (née Southern Pacific #1141), a notable survivor from the same builder. The Union Pacific C40 series was never a “big wheel” design. The former Northern Railway Series of Big Wheel type 2-8-0s that carried the Union Pacific name lost most of their power in the early 1900s and those that survived had all been rebuilt by that time (and in some cases, two new giant locomotives, 'Utah' and 'Colorado', had been added since 1912). Instead, if Union Pacific had wanted a big locomotive which could haul trains of heavy grain trains, the designs provided would have been given the “Big Boy” nickname, according to Union Pacific's official website: “The big flatcars of the C-5, C-7 and C-9 road-switcher types could be handled by the smaller steel-wheeled design, utilizing good traction speed and suitable for passenger, troop or assorted service. These slightly longer, 200-ton, C-series designs represent the best power plant available for the road team. This set had about half the horsepower of the company's “Big Boy” steel-wheeled locomotives and is about the same size, dimensions and weight.” Description The Union Pacific Model #C40-8 was the 'big wheel' passenger version of the GE C40-8 series. The model replaces the aforementioned C40-8 Southern Pacific locomotive for use in the Rail Engineers shop. Two Tane badges should be applied however - one for the model, and one for the builder. For a more detailed look at how to apply these, please read the Tane instructions under the 'Tane Modeller Software' article. The model comes coated in green (consistent with the green base color), with most of the body's components given the 'painted look' - except for the wheels (which are unpainted metal, of course), the buffer beams (which have MOLLE tabs) and the buffer bearers (which are included as parts of the body, topped with a separate Tane badge for the railroads builder). Some components are supplied
