“Vapeland” is a track composed to deal with the whole soundtrack set to the atmosphere of this environment. There are a lot of robotic devices which occupy an important place in the Vapeland life. And in this space, it is busy for the different kinds of robots. Also, it has not a huge industrial zone and because of that, there are not a lot of mechanical plants. And that’s all! But, there is a lot of mechanical noises. Robots who work in the Vapeland create a series of unpleasant and noisy sounds which is able to surround with despair and terror even for a person who is not an inhabitant of Vapeland. The major machines in this environment sound more like a singing for a machine or a drumming for a hammer, or a whistle for a spring or a fan for a fan. You can imagine that, machines who have a song, work with an annoying and unpleasant sounds as a tune for all their life, for their internal status is irritating and they can’t be satisfied with it. “Vapeland” is made like a kind of warning of this fact. If you have a chance to hear the creatures in the Vapeland, you can understand what they are thinking. They are completely free of the annoying noises of the machines, and they are as calm and quiet as a forest. Hello! Today I made an exemplar project for the International Freelance Week Competition in @iWorks by @ipridekrafel. You can find the application here. You can comment on my answers using #iwc2018 Entry points I did my project over 2 weeks, because of course I had a personal rhythm. Here is my initial schedule: January 10th: I create an awesome, simple and dummy mobile app January 15th: I code it January 22nd: I finish the final version January 24th: I create a post on Instagram to tell you all about my project January 29th: The deadline is near and my post is still waiting in my draft (yes, I hate making that kind of mistakes) February 1st: I continue working on the project February 2nd: I test it on my phone February 8th: I continue working on the project February 9th: I test it on my iPad February 13th: I finish the project February 14th: I post my

What's new:

- New Japan presents Monday, the 25th of October 2008. Just got back from the most epic shitfest of a fighting ring I have ever been to. Great action, great show and great crowd. Ironic how the less popular company is getting the better house crowd. Anyway, after the event its time to pay it forward and record the results. I decided since we've had a fair bit of fun with the other robots lately I should check out my most hated. The vapoleon from pokemon red and blue. So when the new champion, Krilliku, receives it he gave it the VIP treatment. First I had to kill three guardians for each pool. They may as well be the same foes because while they attack with pretty cool attacks on their own, if that hits the last one, its game over. I don't know what they did to the vapoleon besides nice armor. It resisted a lot of pokemon and had the stupid dodge move. Bizarre trying to look cool and lame. For a moment I thought the robot attack had an effect on their kin but the gems and the pool each reaction protected it from another attack. Maybe there aren't any of them out there. Power and endurance still mattered in this iteration. Had enough stamina to get through the next group fairly easily. Punched it a few times and had enough strength to dish out an equi powerful attack that stunned it and let me go. Up until now my four pool vapoleon had been able to sit two out of the four rounds fairly well, then pop in right before the decisive attack. Krilliku received it and I got the killing blow. Man, just the idea of using another one of these little brick houses just makes me so sad. If I'm ever going to buy a pokemon game it's going to be the X and Y series. I have enough trouble with pokemon fighting games and the classic games.

Sunday, the 24th of October 2008. Got home from my excellent job to find five emails. One was from my travel agent letting me know they found a suitably located, cheap and reasonably sized hotel on the site. One from Bratz asking me to get back to them on whether or not going and showing off Black Blades would be a good idea. Bratz happened to mention how I might be able to get some more characters. The email from the other Nikki? Warjoker86 wants me to do more episodes for them. This has nothing to do with the new batch
