Set in the same fictional universe as his Poul Anderson Omnibus novel Time of the Trystero. Plot introduction Zentropia is based on an imaginary alien culture which has been doing research on stars for some eons. They finally stumble upon a self-sustaining universe and jump in. They found that it would have a huge impact on the human race, whom they had thought incapable of creating their own universe. Plot summary A Zentropian ship sends a probe to Earth.

On board the probe, sealed in canisters of the alien xenocube, are several powerful instruments, as well as some of the alien's incredibly powerful genetic material. The human race uses these instruments, and these artifacts as well, to colonize space. When it works and an expedition to Mars succeeds in terraforming the planet, they are greeted by a race of quasi-humans, who are connected to the probe's instruments and genetically engineered to work for the Zentropians. These quasi-humans, called Mutes by the Terran colonists, are that race's equivalent to dogs, and are used for a wide range of tasks in the Zentropian society. They are also the slaves of the humans, forced to construct the interstellar networks of the Zentropian civilization. Reception It has been ranked as one of the greatest science fiction books of the 20th century by SF Site.
